C A P. XIV.
An act for abolishing of diversity of opinions in certain articles concerning christian religion.

WHERE the King's most excellent majesty is by God's low supreme head immediately under him of this whole church and congregation of England, intending the conservation of the same church and congregation in a true, sincere and uniform doctrine of Chri st's religion, calling also to his blessed and most gracious remembrance, as well the great and quiet assurance, prosperous increase, and other in-umerable commodities, which have ever infloud, come and followed of concord, agreement and unity in opinions, as also the manifold perils, dangers and inconveniences, which have heretofore, in many places and regions, grown, sprung and arisen of the diversities of minds and opinions, especially of matters of christian religion, and therefore deeming that such an unity might and should be charitably established in all things touching and concerning the same, as the same so being established might chiefly be to the honour of Almighty God, the very author and fountain of all true unity and sincere concord, and consequently redued to the common wealth of this his Highness most noble realm, and of all his loving subjects, and other residents and inhabitants of or in the same; both therefore caused and commanded this his most high court of parliament, for sundry and many urgent causes and considerations, to be at this time summoned, and also a synod and congregation of all the archbishops, bishops and other learned men of the clergy of this his realm, to be in like manner assembled.

And forasmuch as in the said parliament, synod and congregation, there were certain articles, matters, and questions proposed and set forth touching christian religion, that is to say:

First, Whether in the most blessed sacrament of the altar remaineth, after the consecration, the substance of bread and wine or no.

Secondly, Whether it be necessary by God's law, that all men should be communicate with both kinds, or no.

Thirdly, Whether priests, that is to say, men dedicate to God by priesthood, may by the law of God marry after, or no.

Fourthly, Whether vow of chastity or widowhood, made to God advisedly by man or woman, be by the law of God to be observed, or no.

Fifthly, Whether private masses stand with the law of God, and be to be used and continued in the church and congregation of England, as things whereby good christian people may and do receive both godly consolation and wholesome benefits, or no.

Sixthly, Whether auricular confession is necessary to be retained, continued, used and frequented in the church, or no.

The King's most royal majesty, most prudently pondering and considering, that by occasion of variable and sundry opinions and judgments of the said articles, great disord and variance bath arisen, as well amongst the clergy of this his realm, as amongst a great number of vulgar people, his loving subjects of the same; and being in a full hope and trust, that a full and perfect resolution of the said articles should make a perfect concord and unity generally amongst all his loving and obedient subjects; of his most excellent goodness not only commanded, that the said articles should deliberately and advisedly, by his said archbishops, bishops and other learned men of his clergy, be debated, argued and reasoned, and their opinions therein to be understood, declared and known, but also most graciously vouchsafed, in his own princely person, to defend and come into his said high court of parliament and counsel, and there, like a prince of most high prudence, and no less learning, opened and declared many things of high learning and great knowledge, touching the said articles, matters, and questions, for an unity to be had in the same; whereupon, after a great and long, deliberate and advised disputition and consultation, had and made concerning the said articles, as well by the consent of the King's highness, as as by ... assent of the lords spiritual; and temporal, and other learned men of his clergy in their convocations, and by the consent of the commons, in this present parliament assembled, it was and is finally resolved, accorded and agreed in manner and form following, that is to say,

First, That in the most blessed sacrament of the altar, by the strength and efficacy of Christ's mighty word (it being spoken by the priest) is present really, under the form of bread and wine, the natural body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, conceived of the Virgin Mary; and that after the consecration there remaineth no substance of bread or wine, nor any other substance: but the substance of Christ, God and man.

Secondly, That communion in both kinds is not necessary ad salutum, by the law of God, to all persons; and that it is to be believed, and not doubted of, but that in the flesh, under the form of bread, is the very blood; and with the blood, under the form of wine, is the very flesh; as well apart, as though they were both together.

Thirdly, That priests after the order of priesthood received, as afore, may not marry by the law of God.

Fourthly, That vows of chastity or widowhood, by man or woman made to God advisedly, ought to be observed by the law of God; and that it exempteth them from other liberties of christian people, which without that they might enjoy.

Fifthly, That it is meet and necessary, that private masses be continued and admitted in this the King's English church and congregation, as whereby good christian people, ordering themselves accordingly, do receive both godly and godly confections and benefits; and it is agreeable also to God's law.

Sixthly, That auricular confession is expedient and necessary to be retained and continued, used and frequented in the church of God.

For the which most godly study, pain, and travel of his Majesty, and determination and resolution of the premises, his most humble and obedient subjects, the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons, in this present parliament assembled, not only render and give unto his Highness their most high and hearty thanks, and think themselves most bound to pray for the long continuance of his Grace's most royal estate, but also being desirous that his most godly enterprise may be well accomplished, and brought to a full end and perfection, and so established, that the same might be to the honour of God, and after to the common quiet, unity and concord to be had in the whole body of this realm for ever, most humbly beseech his royal Majesty, that the resolution and determination above written of the said articles may be established, and perpetually perfected by authority of this present parliament, &c.

* Ex Edit. Stantat.

* x If any person by word, writing, printing, cyphering, or any other—otherwise, do preach, teach, dispute, or hold opinion that in the blessed sacrament of the altar, under form of bread and wine (after the confection thereof) there is not present really the natural body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ conceived of the Virgin Mary. Or that after the said confection, there remaineth any substance of bread or wine, or any other substance, but the substance of Christ, God and man: Or that in the flesh under form of bread, is not the very blood of Christ: Or that with the blood under the form of wine, is not the very flesh of Christ; as well apart, as though they were both together: Or affirm the said sacrament to be of other substance than is aforesaid: Or deprave the said blessed sacrament: then he shall be adjudged an heretick, and suffer death by burning, and shall forfeit to the King all his lands, tenements, hereditaments, goods and chattels, as in case of high treason.

2 And if any person preach in any sermon, or collation openly made, or teach in any common school or congregation, or obstinately affirm or defend, that the communion of the blessed sacrament in both kinds is necessary for the health of man's soul, or ought or should be ministered in both kinds: Or that it is necessary to be received by any person (other than by priests) being at masses, and consecrating the same.

3 Or that any man after the order of priesthood received, may marry or contract matrimony.

4 Or that any man or woman which advisedly hath vowed or professed, or should vow or profess chastity or widowhood, may marry, or contract marriage.

5 Or that private masses be not lawful, or not laudable, or should not be used, or be not agreeable to the laws of God.

6 Or that auricular confession is not expedient, and necessary to be used in the church of God, he shall be adjudged, suffer death, and forfeit lands and goods, as a felon. If any priest or other man or woman, which advisedly hath vowed chastity, or widowhood, do actually marry or contract matrimony with another: Or any man which is or hath been a priest, do carnally use any woman, to whom he is, or hath been married, or with whom he hath contracted matrimony, or openly be con- fant or familiar with any such woman; both the man and the woman shall be adjudged felons. Commissions shall be awarded to the bishop of the diocese, his chancellor, commissary, and others, to inquire of the heresies, felonies, and offences aforesaid. And also justices of peace in their sessions, and every steward, understeward, and deputy of stewards in their leet, or lawday, by the oaths of twelve men have authority to enquire of all the heresies, felonies, and offences aforesaid.
